Organizers

How to practice meditation?

Choose a quiet place. Sit in a comfortable posture, cross your legs at the ankles and clasp your hands. Close your eyes, observe your normal in-breath and out-breath. No forceful inhalation or forceful exhalation. When you observe the breath, the mind becomes empty. Be in that emptiness. If you find your mind wandering in thoughts, gently bring your attention back to the breath.

Breath Mindfulness Meditation

The process of breath-mindfulness meditation is very simple and can be easily practised by everyone.

This method, and the underlying wisdom have been extensively spread to millions of people across India and the world, by Pyramid Meditation Channels, Quantum Life University, Buddha-CEO Quantum Foundation and thousands of masters from the Pyramid Spiritual Societies Movement over the past 35 years. Brahmarshi Pithamaha Patriji founded Pyramid Spiritual Societies Movement in 1990 and relentlessly worked to promote meditation extensively.

Role and Impact of Meditation

Meditation brings positive transformation and excellence in individuals. This, in turn, enables growth, and innovation in organizations and society. Organizations have access to vast resources in terms of people, material, technology and money. They influence many aspects of the lives of their employees, families and the larger society. The more organizations operate in a sympathetic and responsible manner, the greater is the organizational growth and improvement in the quality of the lives they touch.

To implement this virtuous model most effectively, the mindset of the leadership plays a critical role. A leader empowered with the techniques, science and wisdom of a meditation practice carries higher energy and vision, empathetic values, a friendly and intuitive approach, and responsible execution ability.

Meditation develops greater spirituo-scientific mindset in every practitioner. A 'spiritual-scientific' mindset gives purpose, stops greed and the need to wield power. A leader with a well-developed spirituo-scientific mindset uses resources for maximum good.
